ANNIE M. SPRINKLE is one of the most celebrated advocates for the rights of sex workers and those marginalized for their sexual identities. She has worked as a prostitute, stripper, porn film star, cable television host, magazine editor, writer, and sex film producer. Today, Sprinkle has a Ph.D. in Human Sexuality and tours with her populist performance art. Her best known theater and performance piece is called Public Cervix Announcement, in which she invites the audience to "celebrate the female body" by viewing her cervix with a speculum and flashlight. As a director of woman focused erotica in the 80's, Sprinkle was one of the first porn makers to use prophylactics in her films, setting a standard for the industry and providing some of the only positive safer sex information for women after the advent of HIV and AIDS. Through the course of 200 films, Sprinkle has transformed porn into a vehicle for trans visibility, feminist consciousness, safe sex education, spiritual pathos and artistic vision.
